ABOUT THE PROGRAM:

Network Simulation is an open-source event-driven simulator designed specifically for research in computer communication networks. Since its inception in 1989, Network Simulation has continuously gained tremendous interest from industry, academia, and government. Having been under constant investigation and enhancement for years, Network Simulation now contains modules for numerous network components such as routing, transport layer protocol, application, etc. To investigate network performance, researchers can simply use an easy-to-use scripting language to configure a network, and observe results generated by Network Simulation. Undoubtedly, Network Simulation has become the most widely used open source network simulator, and one of the most widely used network simulators.

OBJECTIVES

The objective of workshop is to impart the network capabilities to the project leaders, business analysts, faculty, and research scholars and post graduate students who want to enhance their ability of network simulation. To enable the participants to define network task in Network Simulation, Protocol modification strategies and develop mini projects for network, transport layer and to enable the participants to understand the need for Network Simulation.
